The broadband service was already down at 7am this morning in Edinburgh when I was trying to watch the news. The odd thing I noticed was the network name was not listed in the available network list even after the ether net cable kicked in again. The Wi-Fi and network name did come back on about an hour or so later. I thought it had to be a network failure because I could see other providers still listed ... PS. lets one know how much we depend on the internet!
