I may be out of date as this was a year or so ago, but the killer for me was no equivalent domains, so you needed separate entries for, eg. iCloud and apple domains. So you had to manually keep them in sync. It also didn't pick up automatically on password changes. LastPass does both of these things. It's ugly and too cheap (I prefer Omni-like sustainable pricing models for important software), but does so much, so well. There were other things, but I can't remember offhand.
