Brett, Slogger is really cool. However, I have a couple of bugs/thoughts for you.

Here's the results when I ran Slogger last night:

```
$ ruby slogger
I, [2012-08-09T00:00:06.477668 #1881] INFO -- : Loading last.fm logger for user rsgranne

I, [2012-08-09T00:00:19.294869 #1881] INFO -- : Loading gist logger for user /Users/rsgranne/bin/Slogger/lib/gistlogger.rb:9:in `initialize': No Gist user configured (RuntimeError) from slogger:70:in `new'
  from slogger:70
```

Two things:

```
<ol>
<li>
```

Note the error grabbing my blog entry. No idea why that failed.

```
</li>
<li>
```

Note the gist error - my config has these lines for gist:

```
gist_user: ""
gist_tags: "@social @coding"
```

```
</li>
</ol>
```

I don't use gist, & neither your example config nor the notes for Slogger said what to do if you didn't use a service. Can I simply remove the lines for gist? Or comment those lines out? You might want to include something about that in your notes.

It raises a warning, but shouldn't stop the script. If I recall my late-night thought process, you should be able to just remove the gist lines from the config and it won't run the gist logger.

I have an entirely revamped code base in the works, so I'm doing no debugging on the current version. All of this is covered in the new code, though.
